

In response to the FCC's consideration of watering down NJ's Do Not Call protocols please be advised that our state program is just fine with residents as it stands. Please understand that I am a staunch capitalist however the ability of telemarketers to intrude uninvited into our homes via the phone line goes way beyond acceptable commercial "rights". When will it be understood that I as a consumer, philanthropist, etc. certainly have the means to contact a commercial entity in the event I am looking to conduct some business. Subsequently I would state that modification of the existing NJ Do Not Call protocol would represent a sell out to the commercial special interests of the telemarketing business community. I have a better idea...since the FCC must have a finite number of resources and time why then not focus instead on the ridiculous Internet spam telemarketing farce as opposed to tinkering with something that works. I know that the NJ program must be working if telemarketers are complaining.
